On June 1 the second full-length album by Nuclear Salvation, "Ruins Of Reality", will be out on the market.

All songs on the album are written by guitarists Daniel Jonasson & Markus Svensson. Compared to the debut album, "The Beginning Of The End", the new songs are more melodic and have much more diversity. Thanks to the great mixing by Studio Fredman the production is also way much better and modern.

The influences from 80's thrash metal are still there but with a more modern touch. With "Ruins Of Reality" Nuclear Salvation really proves that they don't wanna become another retro thrash metal band.

This time Nuclear Salvation has a full line-up and Andreas Risberg is a real maniac behind the drums. Because he only has 1 and 1/2 arm he has a very unique drumming style and has once been called "the Def Leppard drummer of death metal" by Asphyx singer Martin van Drunen. This is also the first album appearance by basist Albert Strachal.

The album has 9 tracks and contains both fast thrash metal songs like "Crawl", "Insanity Remains" and title track "Ruins Of Reality", but also slower more melodic songs like "Rise" and "Denialist". But even though they are melodic they don't suffer from lack of aggression and singer Benjamin Stigestad sounds more pissed off than ever. On the track "Rise" guitarist Steve Smyth (Forbidden, ex-Nevermore) contributes with a shredding guitar solo.

2013 is an exciting year for Nuclear Salvation. Besides the new album the band will also go on tour as supporting act for danish death metal band Illdisposed. The tour kicks off on May 9 in Berlin and will be a blast.
